Trading the stethoscope for the compass: reflections on a career in administrative psychiatry

Explore the challenges, rewards and costs of a career in administrative psychiatry, the role in system stewardship and service reform, and the importance of partnerships and learning how to influence government.

Learning outcomes

At the end of this session participants will have:

1. An understanding of the tension between clinical and administrative imperatives
2. Greater cognisance of the hidden architecture of mental health systems
3. Increased awareness of what shapes reform and how governments work
4. Enhanced appreciation for why psychiatrists should remain involved in system leadership

From Silence to Strength: Shaping Tomorrow's Mental Health Services

We hear often that the current mental health system is an 'illness system maze' that is 'broken'. Contemplate what a future-ready system looks like, what is required to achieve it, and reimagine the role of psychiatry when the focus is on outcomes beyond the clinical.

Learning outcomes

At the end of this session participants will have:

1. Increased understanding of the challenges of the current mental health system from the perspective of different stakeholders.
2. An appreciation of the drivers shaping reform and the essential components of a reimaged mental health system, including balancing prevention and treatment.

After Trieste – the NHS neighbourhood mental health centres

Following on from her presentation at the last ACT branch conference Dr Bree will share her insights into the newly established NHS mental health neighborhood centers. These programs have shared the vision and recent senior leadership of the WHO model community program that began in Trieste Northern Italy and has shaped mental health policy and program design worldwide.

Dr Bree will share her insights into the program following her visit to the Barnsley Street NHS neighborhood mental health center in London and invite discussion about best models for community-facing funded services drawing on her experience, discussions with other providers and published literature. This will take a broad comparative view of the Italian/Trieste model, The NHS neighborhood centers and the current ecosystem in Australia's state and federally funded community programs in NSW and the ACT.

Emergency Psychiatry in Canberra We must be doing something right

AIHW data presented in the AMA Public Hospital Report Card (mental health edition 2025) highlighted sustained improvement in performance measures of emergency mental health services in the ACT over recent years. Our figures are low in comparison to other states and territories.

Examples of this are median length of stay in the ED and the 90th percentile time, which have been declining over the last three years and are now around 5 hours and 11 hours, respectively. These indicators are a reflection of sustained positive work and governance processes throughout the mental health and wider health system, including outpatient services both prior to and after hospital presentation, Emergency Department and Inpatient Mental Health Unit performance, Bed Access Coordination and others.

This presentation examines the interventions and investments that have led to measurable positive outcomes and culture change in our system.
